

THE MN PUC PERMITTING PROCESS EXPLAINED

Fall 2025

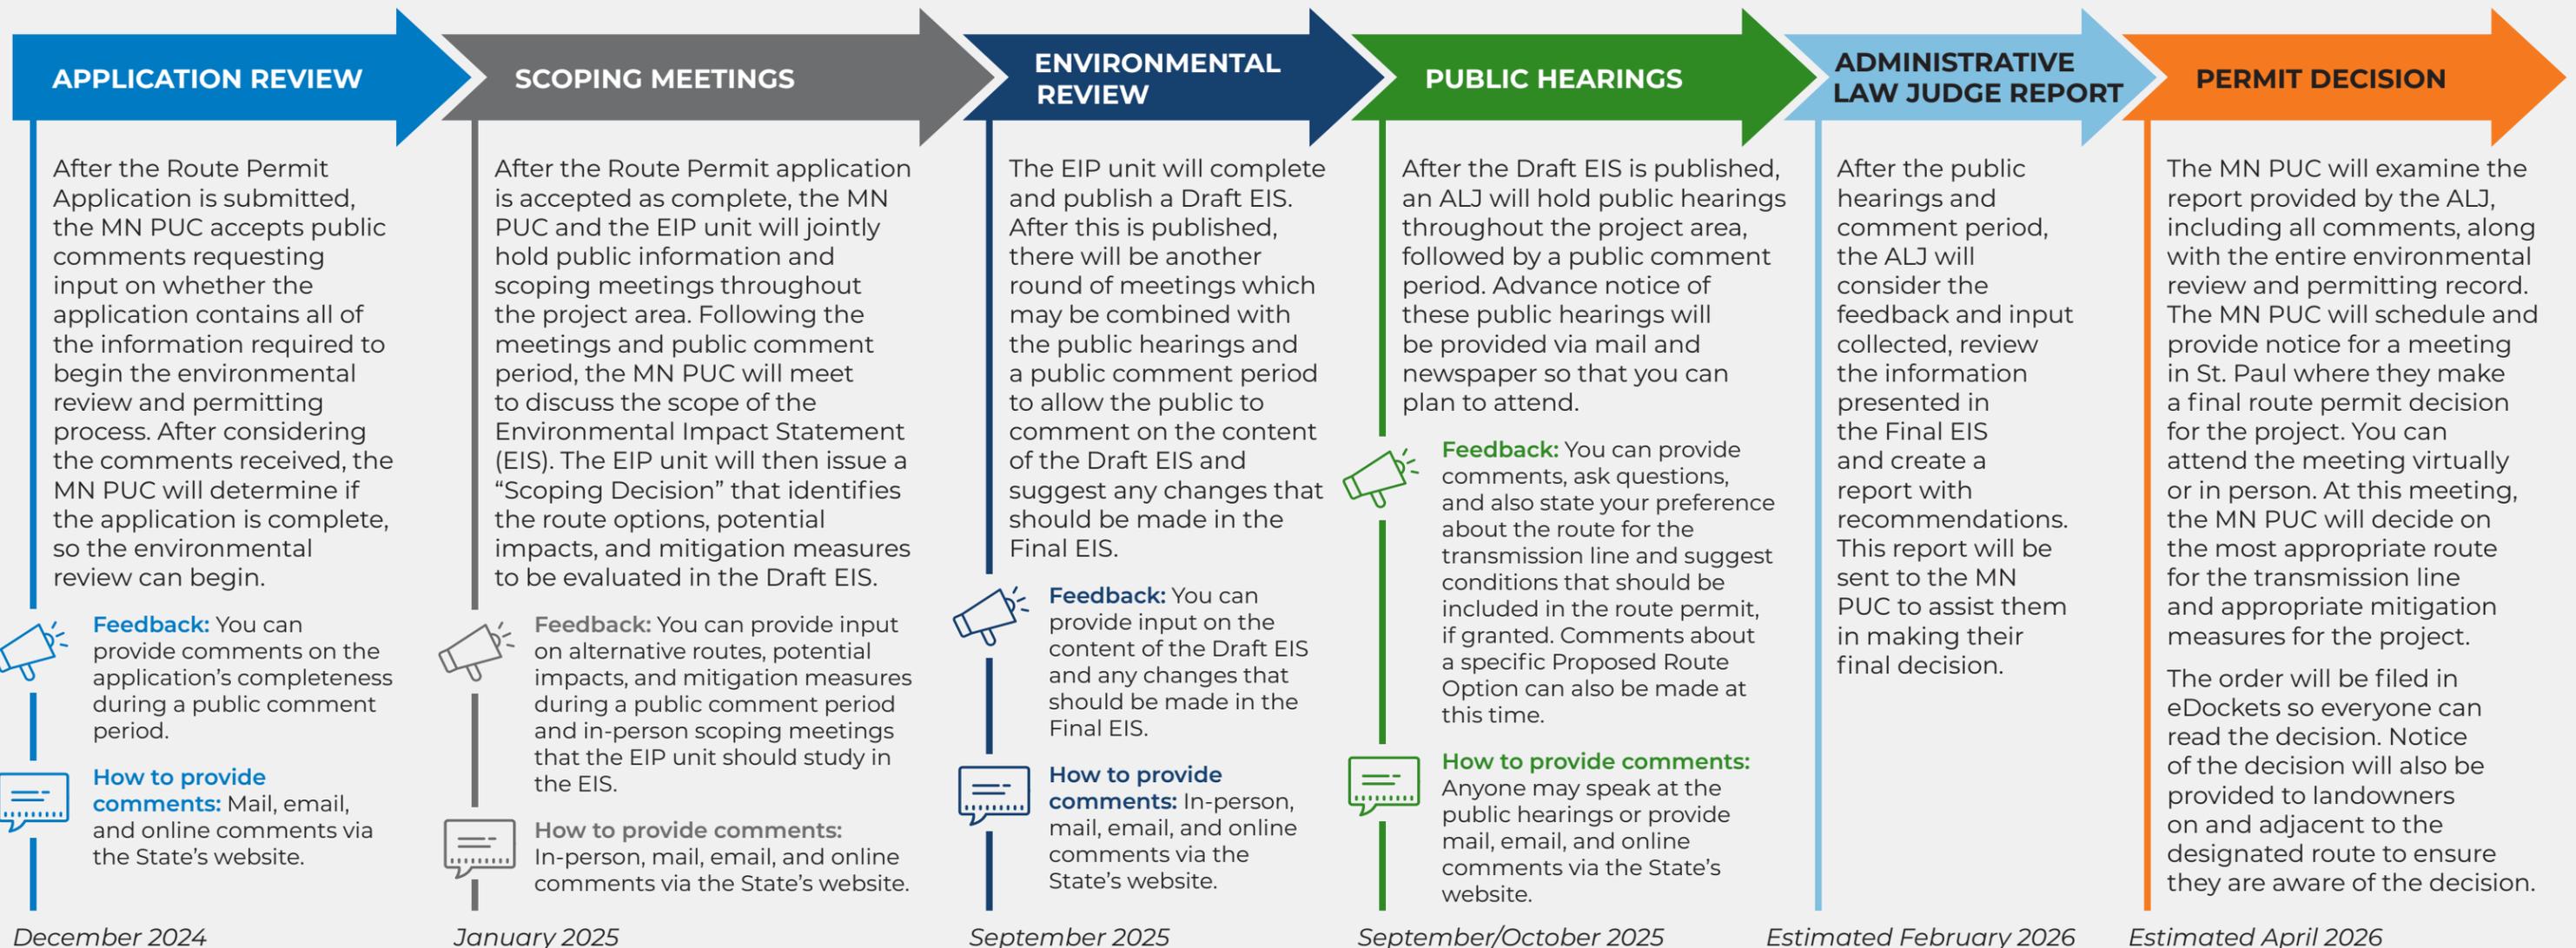

The Minnesota Public Utilities Commission (MN PUC) determines the final route for proposed transmission lines. The MN PUC will thoroughly review the entire record before making a decision.

- Route Permit Application Review: The MN PUC evaluates the submitted application for the transmission line project.
- Environmental Impacts Review: The Energy Infrastructure Permitting (EIP) unit, previously known as the Energy Environmental Review and Analysis (EERA) unit, analyzes impacts of different route options and recommends mitigation measures through an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS).
- Public and Stakeholder Feedback: Input from the public and other stakeholders is gathered during comment periods, scoping meetings, draft EIS meetings, and public hearings to inform the MN PUC in making a decision.
- Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Report: An independent report is provided by an ALJ from the Office of Administrative Hearings (OAH) offering recommendations to the MN PUC based on the entire record.

THE PROCESS

During the process, you will have several opportunities to provide input that will help the MN PUC determine the final route of the transmission line. This handout outlines the steps involved in the process, explains how you can participate, and provides guidance on when and how to submit your comments.

PROVIDING PUBLIC COMMENTS

A Notice of Public Comment Period is issued whenever the MN PUC opens a comment period for public input. The notice will include prompt questions, key topics, and a guide to what information is most helpful to gather from the public about the case.

Each comment period timeframe is unique depending on where in the process you're providing comments. We encourage people to comment early and visit the MN PUC eDocket site for the latest information.
